

CATCH THE LAST OF THE SUNBEAMS

WORDS LIZA KARSEMEIJER PHOTOGRAPHY BART HOOGVELD

Het Industriegebouw is an iconic post-war office building on the Goudsesingel, designed by famous architect Hugh Maaskant, who was also the designer behind the Groothandelsgebouw (next to the central station) and the Hilton Hotel. It is also one of the city's most exciting up-and-coming spots.

Rotterdam-based concept store GROOS has taken up residence at Het Industriegebouw, as has the city's newest breakfast bar By Jarmusch and food concepts Old Scuola (pizza) and Alfredo's Taqueria (tacos). Other creative start-ups and design companies have followed suit.

And while you are there, enjoy the last sunbeams of the year on its outside terrace. The shared courtyard is an amazing place to get together with friends. It's accessible through By Jarmusch and Alfredo's Taqueria, so whether you're having breakfast American diner style or munching on Mexican, take your food outside and enjoy the sun.

> Courtyard, Het Industriegebouw, Goudsesingel 64, accessible through By Jarmusch or Alfredo's Taqueria.

Don't miss it

